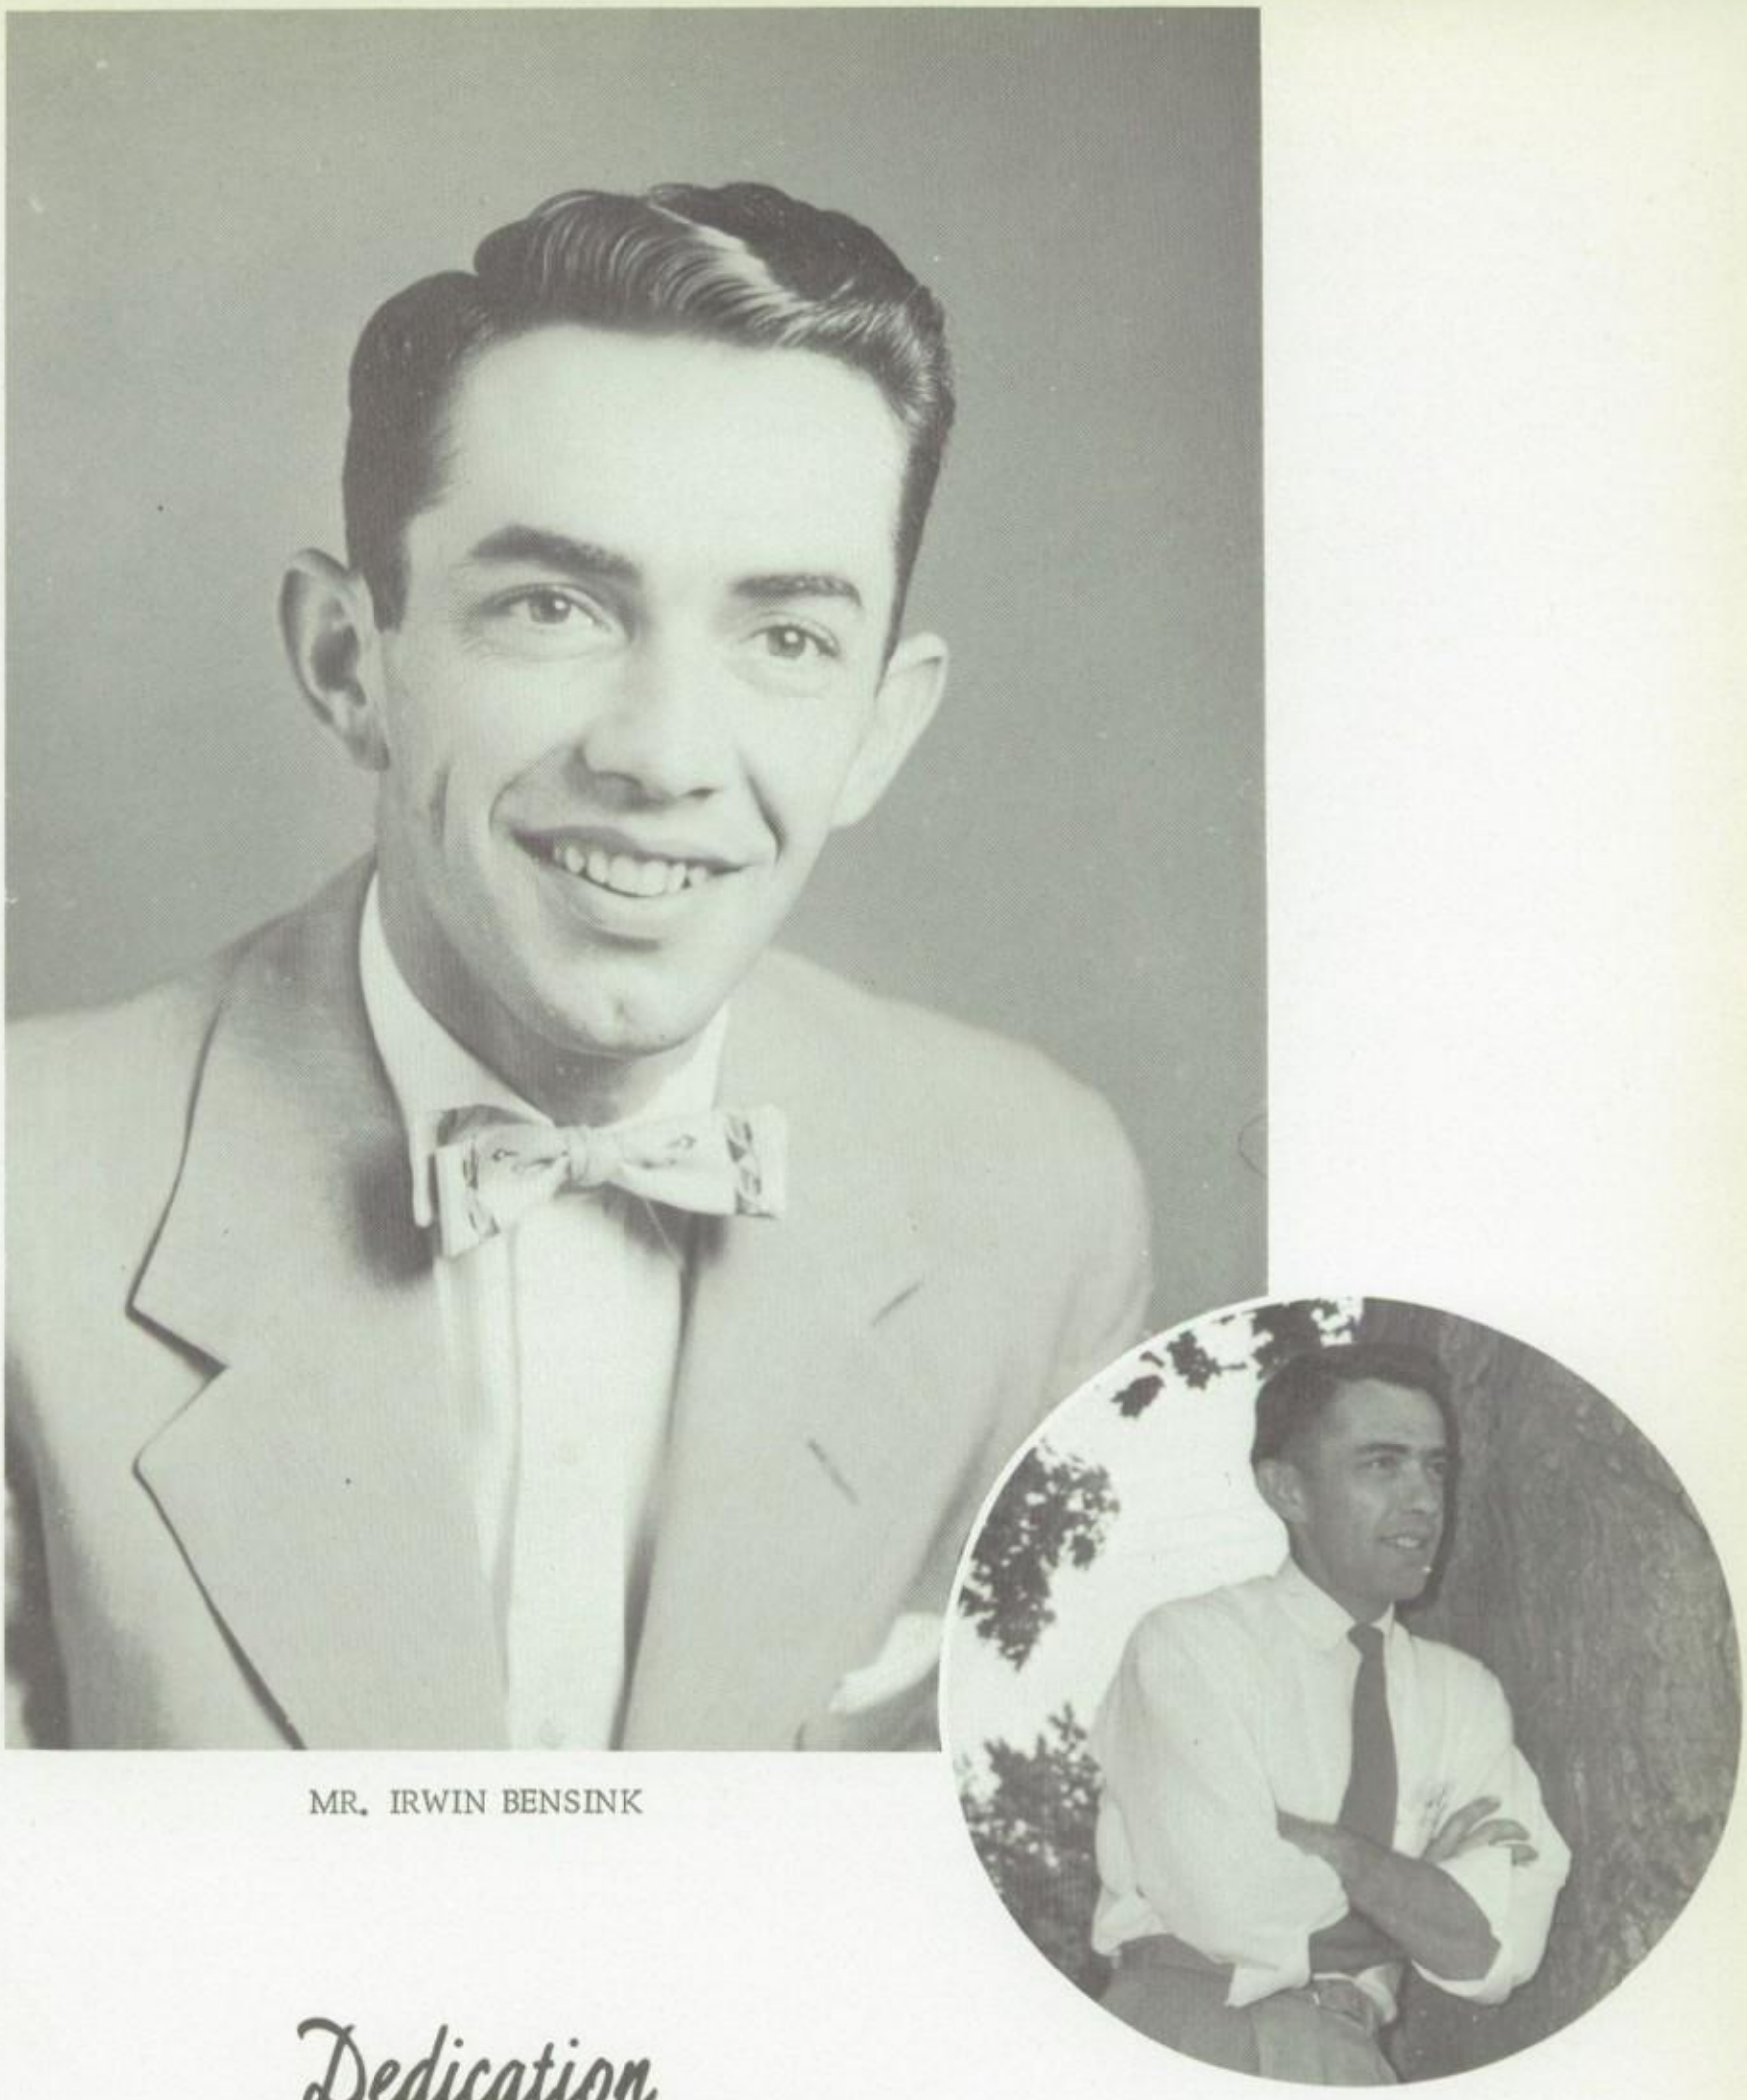
Foreword

To present a book to the public is not an easy matter. It takes a great deal of work to compile the knowledge of a few into a form acceptable to many. This year's annual has met the usual problems, yet has emerged from our hands as a work we take considerable pride in. We hope that we have made living memories of the school activities that you have enjoyed so much and we will miss dearly.

As you look through this book, consider the many other books you have read. Some you have enjoyed and others you have suffered through, but all of them you have learned from. Books play an important part in our learning, as this yearbook will try to show.

Many thanks to Mrs. Beuter, our yearbook advisor, and to Mr. Bensink, senior class advisor, who took Mrs. Beuter's place when she was ill. Appreciation is also extended to the many people who gave their time and effort to produce our yearbook. Sandy Hitchcock, Marlea Ton, Karen Habink and Curt Vander Schaaff stayed many a night working on layout, and Claude Groters, Jr., patiently did the art work. John Good and Larry Habink became a familiar sight dragging the camera around, with Linda Rater and Kathy Rebuck developing and printing the resulting pictures. Most of our literary work was done by Donna Spence. Dennis Hogenboom led the gang that collected ads to help finance our yearbook. The others who worked on the annual are too numerous to name, but our thanks to them is none the less sincere.

Step back into the past with us, and may your future be just as pleasant.



MR. IRWIN BENSINK

Dedication

Senior class advisor is a title which very few of the teachers would volunteer to hold. It takes a great deal of understanding, patience and, perhaps the most important of all, a good sense of humor. Mr. Bensink undertook this task at the unanimous request of the Senior Class, and we feel that he has more than lived up to our hopes and expectations. Because of his drive behind us, the seniors earned top money in the magazine sales, sold candy and cider at a profit and embarked successfully on the many other projects necessary to earn money for the senior trip. Not only does he manage the Senior Class with tact, but Mr. Bensink carries a heavy load of Shop and Agriculture classes besides.

To show our appreciation in a way that you will always remember, the Class of '62 has elected to dedicate their yearbook to you, Mr. Bensink. May you always realize our gratitude for your many hours spent in our behalf.

Junior-Senior Banquet 1961

Friday, June 2, was the date of the 1961 Junior-Senior Banquet at the Peacock Inn in Mayville. Following the tradition of previous years, the Seniors and the faculty attended as guests of the Junior Class.

With "Evening in Paris" as the theme, the decorations and flower arrangements on the tables were lovely. The choice of ham or fish dinners was served to those who attended.

After dinner, Larry Habink, Master of Ceremonies, introduced the Junior Class president, Denny Hogenboom, who welcomed the guests. Bruce Neckers thanked the Juniors on behalf of the Senior Class.

Last year's prince and princess, Bruce Neckers and Kaye Wiggers, crowned the new prince and princess, Denny Hogenboom and Diane Humphrey, who in turn crowned the king and queen, Tom Smith and Pat Long.

Entertainment was furnished by the Juniors in the form of a midget composed of three different people, Doug Walker, Laura Goodwill and Larry Shampoe.

As the banquet came to a close, it could be seen that a good time was had by everyone.

"Room For One More" was presented by the Senior Class on December 11, 1961. The play centered around a perfect parent, Mother, who could not help taking in homeless children. Her husband, Poppy, dies later in the first act, leaving her with a large family to provide for. To complicate matters, Jimmy John runs away, Joey decided to forget about going to college and Janie can't learn to swim. But Mother gets everything under control in time and the curtain comes down on a happy family and a relieved cast.

Miss Winston uses her most persuasive power to try to get Janie to go back to the Home with her. Janie refuses, grabbing the picnic table for an anchor.

Junior Play

On March 22 and 23, the Junior Class presented their play, "Which Shall He Marry?"

The young man in the play, Dick Evans, was in a big predicament. He had to decide which one of the five Randolph girls was worth two million dollars to his deceased grandfather. Susan was the oldest and the most brilliant. Elaine was the beauty. Patience was the good angel. Frankie was the athletic member of the family, and Mary Jane was the youngest and plainest of the girls.

Mrs. Randolph, the girls' mother, spends most of her time fluttering about looking for her handkerchief. Like most mothers, she wants to get the rich young man married to one of her daughters.

The colored cook, Magnolia, and her trumpet blowin' man, Sam, are the ones who finally straighten out this mad-cap household.

PEACOCK INN

MAYVILLE, NEW YORK

In bygone days the Wayside Inn was a resting place for the weary traveler, who paused for a night's lodging, a meal or a refreshing drink. Here in a friendly atmosphere were discussed the momentous problems of the day. Though far in advance of the facilities of the old days, The Peacock Inn retains that same friendly atmosphere, and serves fine cuisine in delightful, and cordial surroundings.
